The focus of Newell's analysis is the bluff, similar to the Congolese sape, which he defines as an act of artifice whereby young lower-class Ivoirians combine dress, attitude, physical comportment and spendthrift practices (1) to embody modernity. The bluff constructs the global as a geographically dispersed scale of social evolution (71), such that goods from

Such imitation, however, is not primarily meant to deceive - rather, as Sasha Newell argues in "The Modernity Bluff", it is an explicit performance so valued in Cote d'Ivoire it has become a matter of national pride. Called bluffeurs, these young urban men operate in a system of cultural economy where reputation is essential for financial success. That reputation is measured by familiarity with and access to the fashionable and expensive, which leads to a paradoxical state of affairs in
